Hello, I've been lurking the forum for a few days now and I deeply appreciate all the great information posted here. Although I haven't received a definitive diagnosis yet, I'm sure I have cancer based on the information I still have (still waiting for the biopsy results) and I'm afraid. Some backgrounds: I just turned 49. My periods were normal, but I started spotting conditions between the periods from July 2017. I thought it was menopause. It got to the point where I had to wear the pad full time for the last few months because it had become a light period, so I went to the doctor in January 2018. He did a Pap smear, and the results came back as follows: Epithelial cell abnormality High-grade squamous cell intraepithelial lesion, severe dysplasia/carcinoma in place, at least present. Micro-invasive or infestation cannot be ruled out. Atypical glandular cells of uncertain value (AGC) are present. Specimen is redesigned for interpretation using glacial acetic acid. ADIS: Endocervical and/or squamous metaplastic cells (endocervic component) are present. Referred to GYN, and he did a colposcopy. He saw a bleeding mass in the cervix, did a biopsy on it, and performed endocervical treatment. The results have not yet returned, but GYN quickly tracked me down to a GYN oncologist and ordered a CT. I didn't do an ultrasound because I couldn't stand holding 40 ounces of water 1.5 hours before the procedure since I started cramping badly when I tried the week before. I'm not sure if it was caused by a urinary tract infection that my core also found. I was prescribed some heavy antibiotics for UTI. The CT report states: There is abnormal thickening/hypodense in the uterine cavity measuring 3.4x5.4x3.3 cm. There appears to be abnormal lymph nodes along the pelvic side. The lymph node is 1.6 x1.3 cm with a central reduced density marked in the left pelvic side. There is a right pelvic lymph node measuring 1.5x0.9 cm saw GYN-Onc last week and he did a visual exam and said it looks like cancer, but we have to do a PET scan and wait for the biopsy results. He's already looking for a second opinion to look at the biopsy slides when they come in. Either way, he recommended a hysterectomy or a radical histo, pending my results. I really want the PET scan done as soon as possible. I think I can handle uterine cancer, but not sure I can handle the cancer spreading to other organs. This is the one time I wish I had opted for APO instead of HMO because it takes time to get permission. The doctor's assistant keeps telling me it's going to take seven to 10 days. Do I have so much time to wait? If everything takes 7-10 days, I may not have surgery until a month. So here I am, day counting, and I'm just all the time. I have cramps and massive back pain that prevents me from sleeping for more than an hour at a time. I take tylenol to control it, but this quality of life is not good. Sorry for the long post. Thank you thank you July 10, 2016, 17:51 UTC / Source: TODAYBy Embry RobertsGreat news - the cast of Traveling Pants decided to send us a postcard! Blake Lively, Amber Tamblyn, America Ferrera and Alexis Bledel - the four stars of the 2005 Sisterhood of Travel Pants film, adapted from a popular book of the same name - had a reunion this week. What does that say? Instagram or didn't it happen? Well, don't worry. They did it. Or at least your sister's nose. RELATED: Sisterhood of The Weekend Prom dress honors teen memoryChemia between these silver screen BFFs is real. Last year, a rumor that Blake Lively named three goddaughter women to his first child with actor Ryan Reynolds set all our hearts aflutter. Turns out that's what the rumor is. They're my dear friends, Blake Lively told E! News, clarifying that she did not officially name their godmother. But, I would say that my child has a lot of fairy godmothers, she added. Blake Lively on The Shallows and Hubby's Ryan Reynolds20, 201603:34 And with their second child Lively on the way, it looks like this happy family will continue to grow. The goals of the sisterhood. I know I wasn't the only one who saw it. On Friday last week, all four leading actresses in Sisterhood Travel Pants came together for a one heck of a reunion. And after the amazing photos that American Ferrera, Blake Lively and Amber Tamblyn posted on their Instagram accounts, the Internet erupted in a sea of screams about the third film Sisterhood. And the internet has good reasons to want one. With two Sisterhood movies already made and available for your viewing pleasure, the world can seriously benefit from the third Sisterhood Travel Pants movie. Not only is this the right time in cinematic history, after a wave of ladies-led franchises, it's time for the world to embrace a more diverse version of what it is to be a girl in this world and be strong in doing it. I mean, just think about how a wave of amazing female-led movies will be up for themselves at the box office these days. With so many new films portraying strong, independent women like the Hunger Games and Divergent series, there has never been a better time for women franchise management. Viewers, both past and present, will fully eat to eat Film Sisterhood. But it's also never been a better time for a film like The Sisterhood to come back for other reasons too. Because instead of one note interpreting what it's like to be a bully lady (the kind of woman who fights to death for her family and protect her world), the amazing thing about Sisterhood Travel Pants is that it showed a much more dynamic and diverse version of what she should be a girl today. The sisterhood has never been about dystopian worlds and leading revolutions. Instead it is about making decisions, day in and day out, to better your life and have a better world around you. As fun and fantastic as heroines like Tris and Katniss are, they are not exactly accurate images of what young girls face on a daily basis today. And as far as I can get beyond the metaphorical meaning of a fantasy world in which girls are kicking and taking names, these worlds are certainly a little more detached from reality than many modern women face. But the Sisterhood of the Wandering Pants has always accepted these realities. And what's even better: they showed four unique versions of what the girls really go through. Instead of some given out version of what it's like to be a bully lady, the Sisterhood has revealed that it's really like for girls today to grow up in the world we live in. They are positive examples of how different women live, love and work in the real world. And what the world needs now, more than anything else, is more examples of that. Call America, in collaboration with michigan Veterans Affairs Agency and WINC. For all female veterans, announced the launch of a free social platform designed to connect female veterans to the VA and other resources like peer-to-peer support, online courses and in-person events across the country. The Military Sisterhood Initiative (MSI) kicks off on Tuesday, February 18. The Military Sisterhood Initiative is a free social platform that connects veteran women with the national peer support community. The unique challenges women face during military service can make their transition to civilian life much more difficult and make them feel isolated and invisible even among veterans. MSI is a safe place for female veterans to connect with each other and regain a sense of purpose and belonging to the military sisters community, explains Maggie Tolan, program director of Challenge America. MSI's goal is to create a network of women veterans and resources that can help fill the gaps that so many of our sisters in the military are experiencing, said Zaneta Adams, co-founder of MSI. WINC. For All Women Veterans and Director of the Michigan Veterans Affairs Agency. We also want to give veteran women the opportunity to come together to advocate for better status in their community. Led by Challenge America, MSI was and for military women, starting with the All Women Veteran Summit, held in Snowmass, Colorado, in December 2017. Year. Part of its fall Challenge America: Makers For Veterans (CAMVETS) Challenge America program in partnership with Acumen Solutions, a global cloud consulting company, is a field team of software consultants to develop the MSI community platform. The result is a platform unlike any other: a private network that supports social media-style messages, online courses and webinars, event calendars, blog posts, direct messages, virtual peer support circles and subgroups by location and branch of the service. In the MSI Community, members will be able to create a profile and connect with other military sisters near them or across the country to build a one-on-one relationship. Ask for help when they need it and offer support to the sisters in need. Take part in discussions on various monthly topics and weekly issues. Publish and find events, resources and stories relevant to Women Veteran Growth and Empowerment. Female veterans can join MSI today by visiting www.militarysisterhoodinitiative.org and clicking the Please join button. They will be welcomed online when it airs live on February 18. 18th place. sisterhood everlasting pdf free. sisterhood everlasting pdf free download. sisterhood everlasting pdf download
